SUBJECT: Trade Policy Studies

The attached article, which appeared in the August 9 edition of the International Economic and Energy Weekly, looks at the U.S.-EC trade issues you mentioned in your letter to David Low on 5 June. As you can see, we hold little hope for real progress with the EC on citrus or the CAP at this time, and the analysis suggests that the Community may try to respond to the U.S. in other areas. The October 31 deadline for resolution of the citrus issue is particularly difficult because the EC will want to complete negotiations with the Mediterranean states, which have not yet begun, before settling with the U.S.
